Wine Appreciation, Food Science 47000

The Food Science Department at Purdue offers a highly-acclaimed Wine Appreciation class, FS 47000. It is offered on Monday evenings in CL 50 Lecture Hall. Although over 300 students may take the class, it fills up quickly. The course description is “A study of wine production and marketing principles with an emphasis upon consumption responsibility. Historical perspectives form the foundations for wine classification systems and traditional serving procedures. Cardinal scale sensory evaluations are conducted in relationship to various food pairings. Must be 21 years of age or older to register for this course.” There is a $42.00 fee.

This 3-credit class may be taken for a grade or pass/no pass and does NOT count towards completion of a master’s degree. It will appear on your official transcript.

More details about the class registration are on the intranet Full-Time Master’s Program home page under “Announcements” and the Registration Guide. If you are interested, pick up a signed Form 23 in the Student Services office in RAWL 2020 starting Monday, October 18. This form must be taken to the Food Science Department in the Nelson Building during the hours listed on the intranet. Return the signed form to the Student Services office and we will enter the class for you.
